It is interesting to note that the varying views of the medical profession concerning the EXAGGERATED danger of communi FEAR OF cating tuberculosis CONSUMPTION, from one person to another. For the past year or two nearly all of the published utterances of physicians have been directed toward establishing the feet that it is very dangerous for well people to associate with consumptives. As a result there has been a semi-pank throughout the country. Lately the tendency of physicians is to depreent the extent of alarm created, and som eminent practitioners ridicule the lengths to which this alarm has led many people. The subject is a "live" one for Arizona, in view of the many people who come to this territory seek ing relief in our climate from the dis-

At the annual meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine, held a few days ago, there was practically a gen cral agreement on two points, namely that patients who can have the full benefits of an open air life have a goal chance of recovery, and that the popular fear of the contagiousness of foundation as supposed. Dr. Peabody called atexposure to the weather cab drivers were relden known to get tuberculosis and that the inference from that was that an open-air life might reduce the fearful mortality from consumption, which ranges from 16 to 25 per cent of nil causes of death.

Dr. S. A. Knopf read a paper deprecating the outery against tuberculosis as a contagious disease. "The effort," he said, "which has been made to prevent the erection of a tuberculosis hospital in New York has succeeded. There is an abject fear of infection from this disease, which terror I have christened 'phthlseophobia.' Last June the superintendent of immigration debarred tuberculosis immigrants from FEDERAL entering New York, on the ground of danger from infection. I do not share the view that the disease is dangerous to others. It is not contagious; it is attorney, and B. F. Daniels of Nogales description of him, that Marshal Dancommunicable, infectious.
